Feedback and Assessment Process

Constructive feedback is an essential aspect of candidate sense making throughout your formative field experience. Mentors should tailor their feedback to meet your unique learning needs. Some mentors prefer to debrief with their candidates after lessons, while others provide ongoing feedback through Google Docs or by writing comments directly on lesson plans. There is no one-size-fits-all approach to providing feedback. To assist with this process, optional feedback templates are available on the Field Guide webpage at education.ok.ubc.ca/fieldguide, which you and your mentor are welcome to use. Mentor teachers may also choose to document their feedback directly in your Reflection in Action document.

Dates	Documentation of learning/assessment tasks
December Two-week immersive formative experience (Collaborative Explorations I)	Candidates will reflect regularly on their experiences using the Reflection in Action document which is accessible to both the mentor teacher(s) and field advisor (FA). On a regular basis, candidates will update their Reflection in Action document with strengths, stretches, and general reflections that represent their emerging insights and understandings with respect to the learning outcomes (BCTC Standards) and their ongoing personal/professional competency development.
During Winter Break	Candidates will ensure the Reflection in Action document is up to date and the Curation of Learning Summary is completed for each standard as well as the Growth Goals and Next Steps for the two-week experience by January 8 and email it to their mentor teacher(s) if necessary.
January Prior to six-week experience	FAs will meet with candidates to discuss their Reflection in Action document. FAs will check in with mentor(s) to discuss candidate progress to date and preparations for the six-week experience.
February to March Six-week immersive formative experience (Collaborative Explorations II)	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Candidates will continue to reflect regularly using the Reflection in Action document. Mentors provide feedback directly to candidates (Discuss with your mentor their preferred format) FAs will share lesson observation feedback on the Reflection in Action document or by email to the candidate and mentor(s). By March 1 Working with your mentor(s), candidates will ensure their Reflection in Action document is up to date and the Curation of Learning Summary is completed for each standard as well as the Growth Goals and Next Steps. Educators contribute towards truth, reconciliation and healing. Educators foster a deeper understanding of ways of knowing and being, histories, and cultures of First Nations, Inuit and Métis.

Additional Information

Field Advisors: Role and Support

Field advisors (FA) serve as key educators and mentors for you throughout your BEd program as you grapple with the complexities of teaching and learning. FAs strive to embody the attributes of scholar-practitioners, educators who understand the importance of discernment, care, relationality, community, professionalism, research, practice, equity, diversity, and inclusion. As you encounter new and familiar ideas throughout the program, our goal is to support you in reflecting deeply to develop a philosophical and pragmatic language that will serve as the foundation of your unique and ever evolving scholar-practitioner identity.

You should contact your field advisor whenever you are concerned with your mentor relationship, progress or have questions regarding expectations and assessment. If you have concerns, please do not hesitate to contact your field advisor. It is preferable to contact the advisor early when there is a concern.

We are here to support you!

Collaborating with a Mentor(s)

Collaboration manifests in distinctive ways within each partnership context; examples include:

- Collaborative lesson/unit planning: Collaborating on the planning of a lesson or unit involves sharing ideas and incorporating them equally. This process can be a joint effort between you and your mentor, where both parties contribute insights and expertise.
- Co-teaching planned lessons: Co-teaching entails the joint implementation of a lesson that has been planned by either the mentor, yourself, or through collaborative efforts. In this approach, both you and your mentor actively participate in delivering the lesson, leveraging respective strengths and expertise.
- Feedback-based planning: You share your lesson plans with your mentor and receive constructive feedback before facilitating the lesson. This allows for a valuable exchange of ideas and suggestions, and ensures that the your planning aligns with your mentor's instructional goals.
- Lesson observation and debriefing: You observe your mentor teaching a lesson and subsequently engage in a debriefing session. This collaborative discussion allows you and your mentor to reflect on the observed lesson, share observations, and discuss successful strategies/approaches used during instruction that you may add to your own teaching practice.

Candidate Teaching and Planning Expectations

You are expected to work closely with your mentor to develop teaching plans and learning sequences/units. It is recommended that you share your plans with your mentor regularly. The timing for submitting your plans for review is at the discretion of your mentor. We recommend setting a schedule for the review of lesson plans, e.g., two days before instruction. Your teaching responsibilities will be based on your readiness to take on new challenges and responsibilities. While it is expected that you will teach within the responsibilities outlined (see pg. 3), there is room for some discretion in assigning workload from your mentor and/or the field advisor. While it is understood that some preparation may be done at home, it is imperative that you are fully prepared for the following day before leaving school at the end of the day.

Candidates Participation in Non-Teaching Activities

You are expected to attend all staff meetings, and school-based team meetings (at mentors' discretion). You are expected to join your mentor when they have supervision responsibilities, if applicable. You cannot supervise on your own and must remain with your mentor teacher. You may participate in or run clubs, or coach sports teams, if you are working with a supervising teacher.

Union Meetings

You cannot attend any union-related meetings.

Candidates Being Left on Their Own or with a TTOC

Your mentor may occasionally step out of the class for short periods if both of you feel confident and ready. It's important to note that you should not be utilized as a Teacher Teaching on Call (TTOC) in your mentor's absence. If there happens to be a TTOC present in the classroom, this can be a valuable opportunity for you to assume a leadership role in teaching since you are familiar with the students and classroom routines. In such cases, the TTOC should remain in the classroom and can provide support as a co-teacher.

Professionalism and Conduct

You are required to uphold the highest standards of punctuality and professional conduct. As a general guideline, you are expected to arrive at school at least thirty minutes before the start of the day and remain at school for a minimum of thirty minutes after the final bell.

It is important to dress appropriately and present oneself professionally, recognizing that you are regarded as a junior member of the staff.
